Egypt and the Russians

'They Never Trusted Me,' Sadat Said

PRESIDENT ANWAR SADAT has given his people a lengthy explanation of how Egypt's relations with the Soviet Union deteriorated since March, 1971. He said he could not go into details, but a small, select group of Egyptian newspaper publishers heard further from Mr. Sadat. From talks with participants. senior editor Arnaud de Borchgrave of Newsweek has reconstructed a transcript of Mr. Sadat's own story, which appears in the issue of Newsweek published today. Excerpts follow:

VOU CANNOT imagina what my life has heen since I beame president. There has hardy been a quiet day without ome quarrel with the Russians. They never trusted me. They aid I was pro-American and onvinced [former vice-presi-tent] All Sabry that I was sellng Egypt ont to the Americans.

My tongue went dry arguing with them. When I went to Moscow in March, 1971, and made our first request for MiG-23s, which we needed to counter the Phantoms the Americans were giving the Israelis, I was told they were so complicated to Ty that it would take five years train our Egyptian pilots. I knew this was nonsense as my own experts had told me that it would only take six months to convert a pilot from MiG-21 to MiG-23. They said they could only supply these planes with Soviet pilots and that they would have to remain under Russian command, I told them this was an unacceptable breach of Egyptian sovereignty. But they would not relent and since we needed a credible deterrent for the Phantoms I finally agreed on condition that this would be a stopgap solution

pending the conversion of our own pilots.

They told me the MiG-23s would he sent to Egypt very soon and that they would begin training our own pilots on them immediately. They never came. Instead they tried to overthrow me with the ebortive All Sabry [Soviet Ambassador Vindimir] Vinogradov came to see me and said [President Nikolei] Podgorny wanted to come to Cairo as soon as possible. It was urgent, he said, I told him I saw no reason for such a visit but when he said it was in relation to our request for modern wespons, I agreed. When Podgorny came in May of last year, he pulled out a treaty and said I should sign it, This was the first inkling I received about a new treaty. I said it was not necessary. But he was very insistent and said he could not return to Moscow without it. When I asked him why, he said the Central Committee in Moscow felt this was essential as proof of long-lasting friendship and understanding.

I suggested he give us time to study it and that he come back July 23 [1971] for the anniverthis would be a more eppropriate occasion to sign such a document. Besides, I added, this date was only a few weeks away. But Podgorny wouldn't take no for an answer, I also asked him how I could possibly explain to my people that such a short visit by the Soviet president to Cairo produces such a momen-tous treaty. He then gave me his solemn word of honor that within four days of his return to Moscow, the first MiG-23s would arrive in Egypt. For this reason, I decided to sign the treaty. I also felt this would finally convince tha Russians

Four days, four months, eight months went by and nothing happened. They knew that I had made 1971 the year of decision for the liberation of our occupied land but it was becoming increasingly clear that the; didn't want to help us solve the problem with the equipment we needed and that no-war-no-peace had become the cornerstone of Soviet policy in the Middle East,

This showed that when the Russians want to throw their weight behind a country at war they are not necessarily deterred by the fact that the United States stands behind that country's opponent. On Dec. 11, I informed the Russians I wished to visit Moscow hefore the end of 1971. They didn't reply until the 27th and suggested a meeting in February. U.S., Saigon Planes Develop Ways To Dodge Low-Level Red Missiles

By Malcolm W. Browns SAIGON, July 30 (NYT).-New tactics being employed by South Vietnamese and American aircraft have significantly reduced the threat from small Communist heat-seeking missiles, which for a time curtailed air operations in some areas. The missile involved is tha SAM-7 "Strella"—an anti-aircraft sensitive that it homes on the hot exhaust even of reciprocating engines of the type used in light south of Salgon. Now, however, helicopters are again playing a key role in tha fighting along Route 1 and for Quang Tri City. There is increased confidence that the Strella threat has been greatly reduced.

The two most important antimissile defenses are the practice of evasive flying and the use of hot objects to distract the missiles away from their targets.

Twice last week, the South
Vietnamese Air Force reported that two of its AC-119 attack planes successfully defended themselves from Strella attacks by dropping flares. The intense heat of a magnesium flare has proved to be much more attractive than any aircraft engine to a Strella, which explodes harmlessly on reaching the flare.

Sometimes the firing of tracer shells or other het ordnance also has deflected the Strellas. But this technique is useful only if the crew of an aircraft is aware that n missile has been fired at them and is, therefore, most effective at night when tha muzzle blast of the firing is clearly visible.

Helicopter pilots on the Quang Tri front now find they are safest flying just a few feet above the ground, and, whenever possible, along roads known to be controlled by friendly troops. At extremely low altitudes, helicopters can be seen and heard only when they are almost directly overhead and are often past enemy gunners before the latter have time to react.

On the other hand, helicopters flying low down are especially vulnerable to small arms fire and North Vietnamese troops have had some success bringing them down with B-40 rockets that are normally fired at close range by infantrymen against tanks or

Prince Souvanna's moves followed his rejection of demands from right-wing elements of his coslition government formed in 1963 that he resign the premier-ship, political sources said.

Prince Souvanna proposed that the cease-fire be under the "active and effective control" of the International Control Commission with the participation of nations to be agreed upon by his government and the Pathet Lao. The ICC, composed of India, Poland and Canada, was set up

LOS ANGELES, July 30 (WP). Supreme Court Justice William O. Douglas, acting on a defense appeal over government wiretapping halted the Pentagon papers trial of Daniel Elisberg and Anthony Russo yesterday, 48 hours before it was to begin. Justice Douglas said he wr "exceedingly reluctant" to stop n trial in which the jury had been selected, but said he was doing so out of concern that the defendants' constitutional rights may have been violated by "the powerful electronic ear of the government."

The constitutional right earnestly pressed here is the right counsel guaranteed by the Sixth Amendment," Justice Doug-las wrote, "The guarantee obviously involves the right to keep the confidences of the client for an attorney overheard in n wire-

Friday, Mr. Davis said that primary campaign, in which both he and Sen. Eagleton were trying to unseat Edward B. Long, that i man identifying himself as an off-duty state trooper offered him an envelope containing copies of the purported arrest records.

Mr. Davis said he made no effort to check the man's identity and conceded that he could not be sure that the papers in the envelope had, in fact, been copies of legitimate arrest reports.

He said that when he opened the envelope, "there were photo-static copies, kind of like a Thermofax sort of thing, of traffic violations, and I don't recall the exact number, but certainly there wers 9, 10, 11 of them." He said that the alleged violations had included "speeding and there was reckless, careless

He said neither traffic "incident" had involved drinking. His staff later acknowledged two other speeding citations when Mr. Engleton was 18 and 24 years old. Missouri officials said they had no records of the sort described by Mr. Anerson or his source.

Mr. Davis said that he "tora all that stuff up, frankly." Asked if someone could have falsified the documents and made photostats of them as a campaign ploy, Mr. Davis said, "there's always that possibility." Professing to be n friend of

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y., July 30 (NYT) -The UN has broken weeks of official silence on couditions in the African country of Burundi with a statement calling the dimensions of the buman tragedy there "staggering" and strongly implying that the killings were continuing.

The Burundi government itself, the UN said Friday, told a mission from the world organization that was allowed into the country last month that 80,000 persons had died since the end of April, when an unsuccessful coup d'état led to widespread reprisals against Hutu tribesmen, the country's from Sen. Diplomatic sources here and in Washington went further, estimating the number of dead at 100,000 to 200,000. The sources also expressed fear that the Hutus would turn against the ruling Tutsi minority, touching off a new wave of slaughter.

The United Nations also said that the Burundi government told the mission "that 500,000 persons, including 50,000 widows and tens of thousands of orphans, are experiencing great suffering and are in need of humanitarian assistance." The mission estimated that 40,000 persons had crossed Burundi's borders seeking refuge outside. From refugees, but also from reliable contacts inside the country where the UN still has a staff of economic advisers, reports have reached here of widespread atroclties. These authorities are reluctant to say much about the situation in Burundi, belleving as one delegate said, that the United Nations is "walking a political tightrope" with the Burundi government, headed by Col Michel Micombero. Bombing Is the Issue dike system of North Vietnam hae introduced a good deal of material that is irrelevant to the main issue. Kurt Waldheim's intervention was unfortunate, not only because the Secretary General of the United Nations had no factual information to report, but because North Vietnam has consistently denied the UN authority to take any constructiva part in the problems of Vietnam. As for Jane Fonda, since her only title to a public hearing springs from her admitted ability to dramatize the words and ideas of others, she has yet to demonstrate that her own words, her own account of events, carry any weight.

There is a substantial amount of evidence, as well as logic, supporting the administration's contention that it is not deliberately trying to weaken or destroy North Vletnam's protection against floods. There is also good reason to suppose that North Vietnam has seized on the assertion of deliberate bomb damage as a good propaganda weapon. The reaction of President Nixon of itself would indicate that it is not altogether ineffectiveae an argumentative device.

But in terms of fact, the question of the dikes could obscure, rather than strengthen, the real case against American policy in Vietnam. And that case is the use of strategic bombing in an area where such methods are least decisive and most destructive.

A highly mechanized society is most vulnerable to the threat from the air. In North Vietnam, which produces so few of its own weapons, which is so little dependent even By exhortation? Or by stopping the war?

The debate over the bomb damage to the upon mechanized transport, whether by rail or road, many, many tons of bombs must be used to achieve the same results that would afflict an industrialized community after far less effort. The fact that, despite the bombing, despite the blockade of the ports. North Vietnamese troops are still waging war far to the sooth is ample proof of that.

> But even though the many bombs exploded on North Vietnamece soil have not, as yet, proved decisive on the battle fronts, they have exploded. They have destroyed and killed_not as intensively as in the firebombings of Dresden or Tokyo, perhaps, but still out of all keeping with the political issues involved. And should the dikes be seriously weakened, however incidentally and accidentally, the toll could run moch higher. This is, all propaganda aside, an important moral issue in the United States. But it is also one for the North Vietnamese to consider. The bombings were the result of the North Vietnamese offensive, and, however cause and effect may be balanced in any scale of military morality, the practical matter for Hanol to decide is whether continuing this game of winning debating points in world opinion is worth the cost.

North Vietnam can win a political settlement, without further fighting, that would at least be promising. It would not pay for all the sacrifices everyone has made in the war, but very few settlements after any war can be eaid to do that. If bombing is the real issue at present—and to a very large extent it is-how is it best to stop the bombing?

The United States ran a $590-million trade deficit last month. That brought the excess of imports over exports during the first half of this year to $3.34 billion, or 50 percent more than 1971'e total trade deficit of $2.05 billion.

This widening of the trade gap inevitably raises the question whether last November's devaluation of the dollar—which amounted to about 12 percent, taking account of the upvaluations of foreign currencies—was too small.

by Prof. William Branson of Princeton indicate that the devaluation will ultimately holster the American merchandise trade balance by $7 billion to $8 billion a year. But that will happen only when the impact of the realignment of rates under the Smithsonian accord is fully effective-a date impossible to forecast with much precision. As the current United States trade figures show, the initial effects of devaluation can actually worsen a country's balance of trade rather than improve it. For, in the short run, the devaloation worsens the terms of trade—the price of imports relative to the price of exports.

In the case of the United States, the lag before devaluation has its full impact on tha trade balance has been further delayed by differences in the timing of the American and foreign business cycles. The earlier upswing in this country than in Europe or Japan has boosted American demand for importe while foreign demand for American exporta has remained sluggish.

Yet there is strong evidence that the underlying conditions have been established for a marked improvement in the United States trade position. The Department of Labor calculates that unit labor costs in this country rose by only 2.7 percent last yearless than one-third as much as the rates of cost increase in Canada, Japan and most It is too early to know, Econometric studies European countries. That improved United thanks to the devaluation, the slowing of infiation and the strengthening of productivity here compared to the trends abroad,

Before the floating of the British pound set off massive speculation against the doilar in late June and early July, the overall United States balance of payments-of which trade in merchandise is only one element—was looking much better than last year, largely because of the inflow of shortterm capital. At this point the United States needs nothing so much as quiet in the international money markets-and time for the dollar devaluation, slower rate of infiation, productivity pick-up and relative decline in costs of production to yield their full benefits to the American paymenta

Sadat's Decision

The decision to oust the Russians has undoubtedly made President Sadat more popular at home and with most of the Arab world, especially those conservativa countries like Libya, Saudi Arabia and Kuwait, which have ample money to help him. But the decision remains risky. It may be disappointing that Sadat has not altered the Egyptian position on fighting and talking. But in spite of his new popularity. Sadat's position is not such that he can add to the shock of ordering the Soviet withdrawal and aboutturn on direct negotiations, Some time before a settlement, it will have to come. But he cannot talk about it publicly yet. —From the Guardian (London).

The Army in Ulster

There are now more British troops in Northern Ireland than there were in Cyprus at the height of the emergency there. This is a measure both of the security problem posed by the IRA and of the British government's new determination to root them out. In the House of Commons, Mr. Whitelaw declared that the government's "first objective must be to destroy the capacity of the Provisional IRA to terrorize the community."

This marks not the end of the policy of conciliation but a recognition that such a policy cannot work so long as the IRA have tha power to fruetrate it. The political terms go further than could be accented without provoking an extreme Protestant reaction, and even before those terms had been rejected outright the IRA had abandoned their cease-fire. Since then there has been the horror of Bloody Friday in Belfast and it is evident that effective military action against the IRA is the prerequisite for a political

British Labor Relations

It has been a critical week in British indostrial relations. At one time it seemed that the country might be lurching into a general strike. Fortunately that prospect has now faded . . . What le wanted now is some cool and rational thinking from the trade union establishment. Thay must suraly realize that an attempt to destroy the Industrial Relations Act by industrial action is bound to lead to a disastrous confrontation from which they would almost certainly emerge as the losers.

Third World and New World

By C. L. Sulzberger

ALGIERS.—Algerian President Houari Boumedienne foresees in the 1980's a global energy crisis that will vastly enhance the importance of the Arah lands with their reservoirs of petroleum and natural gas. This fact in itself will help provide the answer to what kind of new international balance is developing and whether the superpowers are truly opening a new era of peace or simply preparing to redraw the map.

Boumedlenne, who obviously prays for the former development. points out that the Third World of weaker and for the most part recently liberated countri; "represents a majority of the people of this planet. Our atom bomb is the size of our populations." He devoutly hopes the five major groupings shaping up will establish a positive equilibrium among themselves and also vis-àvis this Third World, thus helping the latter to advance. The five groupings he refers to are the United States, the Soviet alliance bloc, the new and expanded Common Market, industrial Japan and eventually, a dynamic China,

Come what may, Boumedienne Third World nations must learn to depend upon themselves. not others. He adds: "Neither America nor Russia will fight their battles," and then recalls: 'Algeria never accepted foreign volunteers during our liberation war, To die for Algeria was an Algerian affair."

Nixon's Visits

The President concedes that recent developments in interna-tional relationships could improve the position of nonaligned nations but it is still too early to judge. Thus, he says, "Certainly the Nixon visits to Peking and Moscow were e positive factor and helped détente by reducing

"And if there is really a new basis in international relationships and reduction in strain, a new era could be starting. But we mistrust the great powers simply because we are small. We don't vet know what is really behind recent contacts among them. Nor do we know if the departure of 400,000 U.S. troops from Vletnam is for humanitarian or strategic aims, if it is simply an indication of another American strategy. "After all other occurrences in the past year are plainly worri-We saw Pakistan taken apart by force-and I might say. without any help from its U.S. ally. Even if our political relations with India are in some ways closer than with Pakistan, we were frightened to see a country militarily torn apart. This was a serious precedent for us to watch." Boumedienne makes no bones about his hope that rearranged groupings among powers or blocs will establish a stable framework reducing the fear of war and the need for bases. He says: "What the least objection to doing busiwe need in the Mediterranean is fleets—not of naval vessels but of oil tankers and cargo boats,"

He adds the wish that peaceful commercial and technical competition among the Big Five will becefit Third World lands which need industrial and scientific help and that, on a larger scale, this competition will succeed in a positive way to the kind of competition between separate European countries which developed bilateral contacts here.

Pragmatism

No nation or group is commercially disadvantaged by ideology, to Boumedienne's pragmatic way of thinking. Algeria, which con-siders itself a socialist state, hasn't ness for mutual advantage with capitalist states.

This is a different kind of world nowadays," Boumedienne reasons. "It is not a questio i of great ideas elaborated in other lands. Events are moving too fast for old-fashioned ideologies,"

Moreover, existence of formal political relations is not an essential precondition to flourishing exchanges. Boumedienne stresses that aithough there are still no diplomatic relations with the United States (broken in 1967 during the last Arab-Israeli war), trade ties continue to develop, including massive contracts for liquefaction and export to Americs of Algerian natural gas.
The real problem, as he sees it, is the maturing relationship among the five new power groupings and their relationship with the underdeveloped Third World, He expects it will take time before the outlines of these patterns are discernible and he hopes that what he identifies as vestigial colonialist mentality in some nations will vanish. This is of crucial importance, according to his logic, because by the next decade all five power groupings must depend increasingly on Third World oil and gas, Unless the pentagonal structure ha now envisions assumes a stable balance first, the possibility could remain of neocolonialist aspirations developing as the thirsty powers seek energy to fuel their industrial machines.

dramatizes once more tha tolerate, checking the medical records of meo and women who are being considered for positions of great power. Sen. Engleton is not the cause but only the latest example and victim of a much more serious national problem. At the critical levels of government below the presidency, vicepresidency and the cabinet, for example, it is recognized that high officers of the armed services and key officials of the Central Intelligence, Atomic Energy, space and other sensitive ageocies must be carefully checked out physically and meotally hefore they are given access to "top secret" information.

And also, human frailty and temptation being what they are these days, it is recognized that these checks, not by the officials' own doctors but by medical boards representing the national interest, should cootinue regularly during a man's service, lest his health and stability deteriorete under the savage physical and mental pressures of high office.

Intolerable System Yet there is no such mandatory process for the people at the very pinnacle of executive power. On the published records. Sen. Eagleton probably could not pass the tests if they were given. For the scientists who work on atomic weapons, there is such a clear and hard test, but for the President or Vice-President, who have the ultimate power of using atomic weapons, there is none. It is easy to be sympathetic to

The interesting thing about this is: Why do wa forget the elemental lessons of the past? Why rely in such important matters on the valuable but accidental and often imprecise disclosures of newspaper reporters, or the reassurances of men who are obviously more concerned with the political than with the medical facts; or even, why rely on Eagleton's doctors, who have been put in the ewkward position of being dragged before the press to pass judgment on Eagleton's health without being able to disclose, at Eagleton's request, their original, objective reports of the facts?

This is obviously an absurd situation, but it is not primarily the fault of Eagleton or Mc-Govern. It is the fault of a process which is clearly out of date and was irresponsible long hefore the United States was a major world power with presidential and vicepresidential control over weapons that could determine the destiny of the human race. The irony of this problem of health, politics and nower is that it has been so obvious for so long without any effective remedy or defense. Soviet Rights Group Receives Warning From Secret Police

By Robert G. Kaiser

MOSCOW, July 30 (WP).-A high-ranking KGB officer has accused the Soviet Committee for Human Rights of contributing to anti-Soviet- propaganda. a potentially serious accusation against the group led hy Andrei Sakharov, a distinguished Soviet physicist.

The KGB's warning came in a recent interview with Valery N. Chalidze, a young physicist and associate of Mr. Sakharov. Mr. Chalidze has revealed in an in-terview that the KGB questioned him twice, on July 5 and 7. Perhaps because of Mr. Sakharov's renown as "the father of the Soviet hydrogen bomb," the Human Rights Committee has largely escaped official persecu-November, 1970. The committee has only four members, and its work has consisted of public statements on Soviet laws and legal proceedings.

Mr. Chalidze's two interviews with a senior KGB official, the ardistant director of the National Department of Investigation, followed several months of apparently intensified secret police crackdown on political dissidents. In an interview in his room in a communal Moscow apartment, Mr. Chalidze said that he thought that official pressure on dissidents was increasing markedly. 'I feel that the situation is worse than it was a year ago," On July 5, he was personally threatened with "repression," Mr. Chalidze said, which he interpreted as a threat of arrest. "The situation must be bad," he "I have always written protests against the misuse of the law or suggesting improvements of the law. If I'm arrested for that, it means you can't do that anymore in this country," he said.

Mr. Chalidze does not have Mr. Sakharov's international reputation as a physicist, so be may be more vulnerable to police ection than his colleague. This is only speculation, however. Mr. Sakharov himself has become increasingly outspoken. In June, he released a memorandum party leader Leonid L Brezhnev, which said in part: "Our society is infected with apathy, hypocrisy, narrow-minded egoism, hidden cruelty. The majority of the representatives of its highest atrata—the party and government administrative apparatus, the most successful strata of the intelligentsia—hang on tenaciously to their open and secret privileges and are deeply indifferent to violations of human rights, to the interests of progress and to the security of future mankind...' Mr. Chalidze said that he personally had never engaged in direct attacks on the Soviet system but had concentrated instead on ways of strengthening the legal protection of human rights. He said that he had been "deeply affected" by the arrest ni Pyotr Yakir, a prominent dissident and son of a Soviet general shot in Stalin's purges. Mr.

Yakir was picked up by the KGB last month. Mr. Challdze said that he had not received any mail from abroad for months, although he knows from people he has talked THE FINEST PERFUMES & GIFTS, ALL IN ONE SHOP

Black Doctors Launch Probe of Syphilis 'Study'

WASHINGTON, July 30 (AP). The National Medical Association, an organization of U.S. black doctors, sald Friday that it has launched an investigation into a 40-year-old U.S. government syphilis experiment involving 600 Alabama black men. Public Health Service officials

Swiss Block Secret Accounts Of 3 Linked to Drug Traffic

GENEVA, July 30 (NYT).— The Swiss Ministry of Justice disclosed Friday that it had frozen more than $500,000 hidden secret Swiss bank accounts by international drug traffickers.

spokesman for the ministry's narcotics bureau said that the freezing of three numbered accounts marked the first moves against the use of Swiss hanks by drug smugglers.

The action was taken as the result of the identification of the holders of the accounts as drug operators through information supplied by the French and American authorities, the spokesman said.

One of the drug nperators, who had $104,000 in a secret account, identified as an Italian-American named Francesco Soli-

He said that the Swiss police in accord with the Justice Ministry, have been working with keeping track of the movement of known drug dealers. The cooperation of the Swiss attorney general and of the attorneys general of the cantons, or states, is sought when it is a question of investigating bank accounts suspected of belonging to drug rings, it was stated. The law guaranteeing the secrecy of Swiss banking accounts does not prevent surveillance over the accounts, numbered or otherwise, when it is shown that this would aid in tracking drug-racket figures, the spokesman said. The identity of the holder of a numbered Swiss account must be known to the bank's management. The number is used only to prevent the holder's identity from becoming common knowledge among the hank staff. Legal proceedings involving the deposits of drug traffickers can be initiated in Switzerland only after the accused is found guilty, wherever he may be tried.

Broader cooperation between the United States and Swiss authorities on narcotics matters will he possible under the projected legal-assistance treaty between the two countries.

Over University Students

By Henry Giniger

MADRID, July 30 (NYT),-The government imposed rigid disciplinary controls over Madrid's two universities Friday in an elfort to control student and faculty unrest.

Statutes providing some uni-versity autonomy and student representation were suspended for at least a year, and new decrees established what some university members called a virtual state of siege on the two campuses. Similar measures were expected to be established in Barcelona, another important center of un-

The government was reacting to one of the most disorderly academic years io university history. Thousands of students lost the cotire year by refusing to atteod classes or take exammations. What has become normal student resistance to Spain's authoritarian rule was aggravated during the year by strikes and disorders stemming from interuniversity problems.

Medical Students Angry

Medical students, in particular, were incensed by a new study program for which there were not enough classrooms and by a process of dismissing a number of studeots because of a lack of hospital facilities for practical training work. Demonstrations on the campuses outside Madrid and in the capital's streets, lilegal meetings, and clashes with the police were frequent from last October uotil the close of the school year in June. Wholesale auspensions of dents and some arrests merely added fuel to the fire.

The two decrees in effect reestablished the older, more authoritarian regime under which the universities operated two years ago, hefore more liberal

U.S. Aide, Brezhnev Discuss Siberia Development Projects

حكذا من الاصل

MOSCOW, July 36 (Reuters). Mr. Peterson leaves the Soviet Union this week. Peterson, here to negotiate a trade agreement, spent three hours in the Crimea with Communist party leader Leonid Brezhnev today, discussing a posalble joint venture to develop Siberian resources.

U.S. Embassy officials said Mr. Peterson left this morning on a flying visit to Mr. Brezhnev's state summer residence on the Black Sea, returning to Moscow later in the day.

An official said the two discussed "concrete steps toward the possible joint development of natural resources and the manufacture and sale of various products.

The official did not elaborate, but observers believed the two discussed the possibility of American big businers developing natural gas resources in Siberia. Under such a scheme, Russia would then sell the gas to the United States to pay off the vast development costs, estimated to amount to at least four billion dollars for oue such project.

U.S. Ambassador Thomas Melady, who called to present his credentials, thanked Mr. Amin for "this warm velcome." Mr. Melady, a former ambassador to Burundi, succeeds Clarence Clyde Fergusoo jr.

Mr. Amin urged an immedials and total U.S. withdrawal from Victnam, saying it was "shameful for a country of America's size to fight a small country like North Vletnam."

"The Americans have been dofeated in Vletnam, but they cannot accept this," be said. Mr. Amin also charged that Israelis had been entering the country on U.S. passports. Uganda broke relations with Israel in March and expelled all Israelis from the country in a move that gained friends in the Arab world for Mr. Amin, who settled power in a January, 1971, coup.

of advanced weaponry. That's escalation.

And behind all this is the fact that Israel persuaded the U.S. that my peace initiative of February, 1971, was just the beginning of a series of Egyptian concessions. Keep up the pressure, Israel edvised Washington, and Sadat will cave in. Well, both Israel and the U.S. are wrong. I am not making concessions. My initiative was a test of peace. Israel falled the test. So did America. Golda Meir never meant peace.

I have told President Nixon since our first contact on Dec. 24, 1970, that we have our own will, take our own decisions and are not anyone's satellite. So I don't see how anything has changed-except to prove to the doubting Thomases that we are truly independent. The only thing that has really changed is that the U.S. administration has failed in all its efforts in 1971 to convince the Israelisthat I want peace end the ensuing escalation. So the situation bas not been transformed.

Borchgrave-Is partial withdrawal to Mit!a and the other two Sinai passes and the reopening of the Suez Canal, under an interim settlement, still a possibility?

Sadat-I regret to say that everything changed when my peace initiative was twisted and distorted by the Israelis and the Nixon administration to remove the link between the partial settlement and subsequent with. drawal to the June 5, 1967, borders. We did more than Mr. Rogers and [Assistant Secretary of State Joseph J.] Sisco expected when I launched my peace initiative. We even work-ed out minor details of the whole problem. There was no response except that your administration went back on every word they said. The Israelis are still living the dilemma and delirium of their victory. I am the one who must ask for a response to our clearly demonstrated will for peace. Mr. Rogers says I have done my level best. We are still waiting for the other side to move.

Borchgrave-What would Israel be getting by evacuating Sadat-You keep forgetting that all I am asking for is our own land. There should be no reward for aggression. I have of-tions under the UN resolution of November, 1967. This means the recognition of Israel's territorial integrity and political independence. It means freedom of navigation. It means everything short of exchanging ambassadors when they give up the Arab lands they conquered

My sincerity as a man of peace cannot be questioned. We have no designs whatever on Israel. That's more than impartial observers can say about their designs on Egypt. How have the Israelis responded? By refusing to move. We have seen one pretext invoked after another for staying where they are. they are prepared to carry out their obligations under the UN resolution, as I am prepared to carry out ours, then we will have real peace.

Borchgrave-How does one persuade the Israeli people about the prospects of real peace in the area?

Sadat-There is an iron curtain in Israel between facts and dogma, Most Israelis have been brainwashed into believing that they must keep occupied territories. This is the way they have been maneuvered by their present leaders. The whole world knows that I am a man of peace, as cyldenced by last year's initiative for a peace agreement. But the Israeli government has convinced its people that I am a man of war.

Borchgrave - Israelis have argued with me that you have never said you would be willing to sign a peace treaty, as phrased in my questions to you in the past, but a peace agreement. Is there a difference, in your Sadat-When Rogers was here he told me that Golda was defying the whole world. She told the U.S. ambassador in Tel Aviv, and Rogers repeated it to me, that no Arab leader, especially Sadat, will agree to a peace agreement with Israel. But if Sadat should agree, sha added, then, "I will put all my cards on the table."

Well, I agreed to a peace agreement, and Rogers sald I had done my best-and more. And that he was now going to only did he fail but Rogers told Tito very recently that we should agree to direct negotiations with Israel and secure boundarles—10 kilometers from the canal and, if need be, on the canal itself. How can we take such a man seriously? A peace treaty implies that everything else has been settled. That needs much more time than a peace agreement because the whole problem is extremely complex. A final treaty implies a solution for the Palestine question, for example. So a peace agreement is to settle the immediate situation and implement the UN resolution. A treaty means complete cooperation on all fronts. You cannot switch from total hostility to total peace, But mark this: A peace agreement would be just as binding as a peace treaty.

Borchgrave—If you have the better case, by virtue of the fact that you are a country under partial Israeli occupation, wby the hangup about direct negogood way of avoiding the fait accompli you are constantly denouncing?

Sadat - We are completely deedlocked. You are mite right. But could Cordell Hull on Dec. 7, 1941, when he met the Japanese ambassador, and even though no part of the contiuental U.S. was occupied, have agreed to direct negotiations with the enemy? Could Churchill or de Gaulle have agreed to direct negotiations while Europe was occupied by the German armies? Israel is occupying our country and saying "let's talk," It's just prope-ganda. I quoted to Rogers what Cordeil Hull told the Japanese envoy and told him he could check it in the State Department records. He said it was an interesting lesson.

And let's not forget that we have not refused to sit with the Israelis in the past-in Rhodes and Lausanne. But not when they were occupying one seventh of our country. Today, it's not just a matter between Golda Meir and me. It's a multiparty affair. Other Arab states are affected.

Borcherave - India invaded Pakistan last year, took 93,000 Pakistani prisoners and is still bolding Pakistani territory in the west, Yet President Bhutto did not feel he was espitulating by conferring with Mrs. Gandhi -on Indian territory. Why do you equate a similar summit in this area with capitulation?

Sadat-What happened there was a dual civil war. India and Pakistan and Bangladesh were once one nation, The same is true between the two Germanys and the two Koreas. We are not one nation with Israelthe Israeli nation was forceably injected into the body politic of the Middle East. I was one of the few leaders who sent telegrams to both President Bhutto and Mrs. Gandhi when they met in Simla and sent a messenger to Sheikh Mufib to say I was convinced that the summit would open a new era in the subcontinent for the benefit of all three countries. Our own situation is entirely dif-

Sochi, the Vacation Resort

Where the Russians 'Le

By Robert G. Kaiser SOCHI, U.S.R. (WP),-Day or night, there is always a crowd under the trees outside the railroad station in this resort town on the Black Sea. People with suitcases and piles of belongings shuffle about looking for a local citizen with a room to rent; landlords walk through tha crowd searching for desirabla tenants. The buzz of negotiations fills the air.

At Sochi, the Soviet Union's most popular sesside resort, more than half the two million people who came on holidays last year stayed in the apartments of local residents, paying a ruble a day each (about $1.30) for a bed in a small flat-or more if they arranged for a room in the street market outside the station, in-stead of using the municipal

most prized privileges.
Virtually everyone in this country has a month off with full pay The Russian word for vacation "otpusk," means literally a "letting go," and that is exactly the Russian idea—to let everything go, forget all ordinary concerns and relax.

Some Problems

A Soviet vacation, of course, is not a holiday from standard problems of life. Russians stand in line on vacation just as they do the rest of the year; people shout at each other, push and break into lines in Sochi as they do in Moscow. Getting something done can be complicated. On a recent evening, for example, more than 100 persons seeking to telephone long distance from the post office waited for their calls. The line to send a telegram was at least half an hour long.

After 8 p.m. it's hard to get a seat in a restaurant. Taxi drivers here will often take passengers only if they approve of the des-tination, and the buses are jam-med. There is no air conditioning in the town, although the mmer climate is comparable to

Despite all this, the faces of vacationers in Sochi are happy, healthy, satisfied. There is a lot more public grinning here than in a big Russian city

Since the idea is to rest, the means are usually simple. The basic need is a bathing suit, which is put on and taken off in one of many little booths along the shore. A popular Item this year is a white plastic triangle that can be worn between the lenses of sunglasses, to keep sun off the nose. Russians are fanatics for the beach, often arriving before 7 a.m. to get a good place for the rest of the day. Vacationers can also take excursions outside Sochi, on buses, motor launches and hydrofoils, which ply the Black Sea

Walking the streets is also popular in this handsome town, full of lushly landscaped parks and boulevards—quite a rarity in Russia. One of the main parks has a few mechanical rides for children, and another has an open-air theater.

Theatrical and musical troupes from all over the country visit each summer. In mid-July, an opera and ballet theater from Voronezh and the Omak choir were in town, as was the Sverdlovsk Symphony. But the or-chestra, at least, played to a balfempty bouse.

The wife of an engineer from Novosibirsk, the largest city in Siberia, voiced a typical attituda toward Sochi's cultural offerings. "We have a good opera theater in Novosibirsk," she said, "We came here to rest."

Sadat Reported To Want Israeli Talks With Big 4

JERUSALEM, July 30 (UPI) .-A newspaper today quoted Egyp-tian President Anwar Sadat as saying that Egypt would meet in direct peace negotiations with Israel if the Big Four powers attended.

In a dispatch from its Paris correspondent, Eliahu Maisi, the newspaper Haaretz quoted Gaullist Deputy Claude Gerard Marcus as the source of its report.

It said that Mr. Marcus had met with Mr. Sada, in Alexandria immediately after the Egyptian leader's speech there Thursday in which he spurned Israel's offer to meet as equals in direct peace talks now that Cairo had ousted its Soviet ad-

Judge's View

If any pressure had ever been brought to reduce a drunk-driving charge against Sen. Bagleton in his jurisdiction, the judge assured The Washington Post, the effort would have been aimed at the arresting officer before the case ever got to the courtroom. The highway patrolman who gave Sen. Engleton a ticket for driving 85 miles an hour in a 65mile-an-hour zone on March 11. 1962, was Trooper James Laffoon. who now works out of St. Louis.

Mr. Laffoon, also reached by phone, emphatically insists that Sen. Ragieton had not been drinking on that Sunday night. "Look," he said, "he didn't have to get it reduced from drunk driving to speeding. He could have made it rough on me and gotten the whole thing covered up, if he had wanted to. He was top law enforcement officer in the state—the attorney general—and there I was writing him out a ticket."

Mr. Laffoon continued:

"He was a perfect gentleman and went in and paid his fine like everyone else. I still get kidded about ft to this day."

Mr. Laffoon also denies ever baving heard drunk-driving rumors about Sen. Eagleton until the last few days.

"In a period of six years," he "he must have driven the 140 miles between St. Louis and Jefferson City at least two times a week. U.S. 40 in those days was a single lane, undivided, and a very hazardous road with a lot of fatal accidents. We patrolled it heavily then.

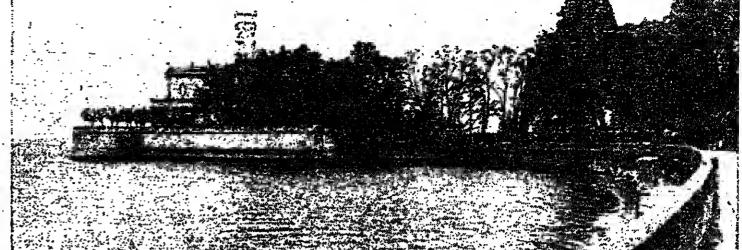

Many Stopped "We stopped a lot of people for minor infractions. But I never heard of a single instance of Tom Fagleton being stopped, certainly not for drunk driving. And, in my opinion, after my embarrassment in giving him the speeding ticket, if any of the other guys had stopped him, they'd have just bundled him up and taken him where he wanted to go without making an official report."

"I'm not saying that Eagleton never got stopped someplace else in Missouri. I'm just saying that it's hard for me to believe that any of the guys in this area wouldn't have been kidding me about it later and saying: 'I took your old buddy Eagleton home drunk last night'."

Meanwhile, Mr. Anderson Frithe highway patrol," Mr. Maupin said. "We used to run the amday still was holding press conferences and issuing statements bulance service for them in those and making beadlines, defending himself and the "veracity" of his back—was a pallbearer in a fu-neral here yesterday. for what he had done, he said The Washington Post, in a dispatch in Friday's editions, bad quoted an unidentified former Missouri official as saying that a highway patrolman had approached him at a 1958 political rally with a sheaf of traffic citations allegedly issued to Sen. Eagleton. Mr. Anderson apparently did not think it necessary to add that The Post went on to say, in the dispatch, that "repeated checks with authorities in Missouri did not substantiate the Lake Constance, or Bodensee, as it is called in Germany and Switzerland. This is the view at Langenargen.

Lake Constance Is Facing Death by Pollution

By Hans J. Stueck

LANGENARGEN, West Germany (NYT) .- Laboratory experiments recently showed that Lake Constance, the main water reservoir for two to three million people, has aged biologically as much in the last two decades as in the previous 10,000 years. According to experts, the lower strate of West Germany's largest and most scenic lake will soon "tip over"-that is, die biologically -unless there is more effective purification of effluents from hundreds of communities and industrial plants. Otherwise, the Bodensee, as Lake Constance is called in Germany and Switzer-land, will share the fate of Lake Erie and Lake Zurich, which have been dead or near-dead for years, On a fine day the rippled surface of the 43-mile-long lake still looks blue, and there are still plenty of blue felchen, or whitefish, a pike-like specimen that lives nowhere else, providing the holiday region with its tasty and most renowned kitchen specialty. Most of the lake's beaches are still open, and its shallows, though no longer clean, are only occasionally cuvered by large stretches of flotsam or dirt

'5 Minutes to 12'

But the lake, which West Germany shares with Switzerland and Austria, is in far worse condition than it appears to be Scientists at the lake-

Has Aged 10,000 Years in Last 20, Says a West German Biologist research institute here, who check their "patient" every day, summed up the situation by saying: "It's 5 minutes to 12." A "biological explosion," the experts say, has begun to upset the lake's life cycle, which had been in balence throughout the 12,000 years since the melting ice of the last glecial period made room for the Rhine River to start filling the deep depression at the Alpine footbills. Fed by phosphates, nitrates and other nutrients draining into the leke, oxygen-consuming algae and plankton have begin to multiply. This is the nature of the blight in Lake Erie, which has been called a sump for the sewage effluents of 12 million people, Today Erie's fish population is degraded in quality, and much of its shoreline is upsafe for swimming.

Sudden Aging

Growing industrialization and population on the shores of Lake Constance and in its hinterland, about 4,500 square miles of West German, Swiss and Austrian territory, have raised the lake's phospate level to 40 to 50 milligrams per cubic meter from virtually nothing in 1935. The comparable figure for 1954 was barely three milligrams.

"In the last 20 years," said Dr. Rudolf Zahner, a biologist at Langenargen'e research institute, "the lake has aged 10,000 years." However, Dr. Zahner expressed the hope that stepped-up con-struction of filtering plants with special devices for simultaneous separation of phosphates and other dangerous compounds would at least stop the lake's deterioration by 1975, or 1980 at the latest. In 1959 West Germany, Switzerland and Austria set up the In-ternational Water Protection Commission that, though without executive powers, has since been coordinating purification work in the lake region. According to Dr. Zahner, reduction of surface pollution is only a secondary objective of the joint effort. The more important goal, be said, is to prevent the pollutioncaused biological explosion from spreading into the hypolimnionthe low-temperature lower stratum of the lake that starts at a depth of 180 feet. The lake has a maximum depth of 880 feet

over an area of about 25 square

In the shallows Dr. Zahner said, the lake's entrophicationthe term for everproduction of algae and other plants in polluted lakes—has already reached an advanced state. Symptoms of the development, he added, were fast-growing reed patches along the shores and the appearance of large numbers of hitherto rare or unsighted fish species, including the brown felchen, a less tasty relative of the delicious blue

270,000 Worms

Another indicator of the lake's worsening state is the rapid multiplication of small mud worms the Tubificidae genus, of which Dr. Zahner counted 270,000 last year on a single square meter.

efforts it took to convince some burgomasters, especially in the hinterland, of the task's urgency." He is also confident that a bill will be passed soon in ban oilreleasing two-stroke outboard motors on Lake Constance. On a fine day, it is estimated, between 15,000 and 20,000 motorboats, most of them equipped with such engines, cruise on the lake, adding to the 600 metric tons of accumulated petroleum residues on the lake bottom. Mr. Gässler stressed that, contrary to river pollution, eovironmental damage to lakes is irreperable. "But we still have a chance" be said, "to prevent a

Obviously a good part of the difficulty is that the two sides do not communicate with each other; another is finding a way. (Continued on Page 11, Col. 2)

By Thomas E. Mullaney NEW YORK, July 30 (NYT).-Over the course of the next few weeks, ineritably, there will be considerable rhetoric and written sppraisals of the Nixon administration's New Economic Program et its first anniversary oo Aug. 15—and the commentary is likely to be quite disparate.

So also will he the recommendations that will be forthcoming to deal with the new problems of 1972-73-the danger of a renewed upsurge of inflation arising out of increased federal spending and a revived cycle of excess demand in the economy (demand-pull inflation). Without question, the economy developed a very strong tone in the last year, with production incomes, employment, and consumer huying all showing sharp increases while the rate of inflation has been turned downward. These were some of the key objectives and the new policies that were adopted in Washington last summer undoubtedly will be given much of the credit for the plethors of salutary accomplish-

That assessment has some TBlidity, of course, but it is probably fair to say that most of the good things that have evolved in the domestic economy would have been realities today without the wage-price freeze and subsequent controls program. The momen-tum and the stimulative forces had been under way before Aug. 15 of last year, although the economy's progress certainly was expedited to some extent by the tax actions and confidence-building espects of the new economic

What might be forgotten-or overlooked-is the basic fact that the New Economic Program was prompted primarily by the desire to improve the nation's severely deteriorated international payments situation and its trade competitiveness. And, there, the results have been far-reaching and mostly positive, sithough far from fully realized as yet.

It was correctly concluded by the administration that better centrol over inflation had to be obtained at home if there was to be any hope of correcting the very adverse-and worsening-international economic picture.

At this time last year, the dollar was under severe pressure in Europe's currency markets because of the state of our economy, particularly its international aspects. There had been continuing deep deficits in our payments and foreign trade and an unrelenting drain of our gold supply as other nations cashed in unwanted dollars. Swiss banks temporarily suspended dealings in dollars and French commercial banks were directed to accept dollars only for current transac-

In that atmosphere, a growing spirit of protectionism had been rising in this country that threatened to bring policies and actions endangering world trade, investment and prosperity.

Dangerous Situation

Several months before last Aug. 15, top administration sources disclosed at a White House briefing their apprehensions over the developing trend and their determination to draft a program to cope with the dangerous situation.

It finally decided on the measures to be taken and made them part of the dramatic and historic Aug. 15 announcement, sending shock waves throughout the world and generating a strong tide of protest. The strong steps taken at that time were the imposition of a 10 percent surcharge on U.S. imports and suspension of the dollar's convertibility into

But, in due course, the nettlesome surcharge was lifted, and the world agreed in December to a much-needed realignment of currency values, with an effective 12 percent devaluation of the dollar included, and undertook exparimentation with a wider fluctuation band for all currencies.

None of those things would have materialized that soon if the United States had not taken the jolting international ections a year ago. Eventually, it should also bring a vitally needed restructuring of the international monetary system to make it more flexible as well as the dismantling of many onerous trade barriers.

Stock Market

Two Airlines' Merger Plan Is Rejected by CAB

WASHINGTON, July 30 (NYT).

-The Civil Aeronautics Board disapproved Priday, by 2 4-1-vote, the proposed merger of American Afrikas, Inc., and Western Air Lines, Inc. The merger was first negotiated in late 1970.

The board's majority based its decision largely on the disruption of the existing competitive bal-ance that it believed would result from the merger, especially on routes between the U.S. mainland and Hawaii.

The disapproval was the first outright CAB rejection in many years of an airline merger plan. One recent merger proposal was withdrawn after the merging parties-Northeast and Northwest Airlines—declined to meet some of the conditions laid down by the government regulatory agency.

The merger would have made American the second largest U.S. carrier after United Air Lines. Bastern Air Lines is now the second largest carrier in the number of passengers flown. Western is the nation's exth largest line. Friday's decision required the approval of President Nixon since it involved some air. service to foreign points. Mr. Nixon did approve the board's action in denying transfer to American of routes to Mexico now served by

Australian Refs Have Bad Day

ADELAIDE, Australia, July 30 (Reuters).- A soccer player armed with a knife chased a referee after disputing a decision during a match here today. Police tonight were looking for the player after the referee reported the incident after a match between Western United and Salishury International at the West Beach Reserve. The referee claimed that the player first spit at him pushed him and then left the field. The player returned with a knife and chased the referee before leaving the ground. Meanwhile in Melbourne, a match was ebandoned when the referee was hit on the head and kicked several times after spectators invaded the field during a match between Crostia and Hakos. The melee started when a foul was awarded against a Croatian player with the score 0-0. Police later surrounded the referee and escorted him of:

San Diego Added To Make ABA 10-Team League

SAN DIEGO, July 30 (AP) .-The American Beaketball Association Priday awarded a franchise to San Diego, increasing its membership to ten teams. The franchise was awarded to Leonard A. Bloom, president of the United States Capital Corporation, a conglomerate dealing in real estate, finance, data processing and ice cream.

The purchase price was not announced, but it was reported to be in the neighborhood of $1 million.

The new team will play in the league's Western Division. Presently, there are five teams in the West and four in the Bastern Division. The league said one of the West teams-either Utah, Indiana, Denver, Dallas or Memphis-would be moved into the East along with New York, Kentucky, Virginia and Carolina.

The San Diego team will be stocked through a draft in which each of the eastablished teams will protect six players, including signed rookles.

Fire Damages Hall For Olympic Fencing

MUNICH, July 30 (AP) .- The Olympic fencing hall, which was damaged yesterday by fire, will be repaired in time for the Aug. 26 start of the Games, Munich police said today.

Investigators believe the fire. which caused 200,000 marks ($62,-0001 in damage, was started by a short circuit in the lighting system of the hall, which is located two miles from the main Olympic complex. Quick action by city firefighters restricted damages to the roof, interior decorations and lighting system police said.

North's two-club open in third position was strong and artificial. and East contributed a preemptive jump to three spades, When South passed, West jumped to five spades, forcing his opponents to guess at a high level before they had made a natural bid.

North doubled to show a defensive hand, but South was not satisfied with a non-vulnerable penalty. He hoped for a slam, or to push his opponents to six spades. Not unnaturally, he tried for the slam in diamonds, Diamonds proved to be the wrong suit, but the heart fit could hardly be discovered at this point.

West led the spade jack and South ruffed and led a trump to dummy's honors. He ruffed a second spade, played another round of trumps and ruffed the spade king. Next he tried the heart finesse with a slight extra chance: If East held a singleton heart king, he would have to return a club, which might help

Six hearts is a far better contract, easy to make after the normal lead of the spade ace, ruffed in the South hand. The declarer takes a heart finesse, and eventually discards his club ten on a diamond winner.

An opening club lead forces the declarer to guess the position of the club king at the first trick. There is a more interesting pos strongly. East could diagnose the spade void and make the brilliant lead of a low spade, thinking that the declarer would be likely to ruff in dummy wherever the spade king was.

If North had routinely ruffed, he would have had no way to recover. The right play was to discard from dummy, judging that the slam bad no chance if West held the spade ace and East the heart king.

THE SILENCE OF THE NORTH By Olice A. Fredrickson with Ben East. Illustrated Crown. 209 pp. $5.95.

Reviewed by Anatole Broyard

Outdoor Life ran five true stories that were excerpted from manuscripts sent to the editor by a woman in her middle 60s named Olive Fredrickson, The manu-scripts described, in phonetic spelling her life in the northern part of western Canada during tury, and the stories evoked such an astonishing response from readers in every part of the Unit-ed States and Canada that Ben East, the magazine's senior field editor, decided to shape Mrs. Fredrickson's manuscripts into a book, "The Silence of the North." Her adventures would have been trying enough for a man, but for a 117-pound woman they were almost incredible. Married at 19, she was widowed at 26 when her first husband was drowned in a storm. Her daughters were then 7 and 5, her son 2. With the little money she had, she bought 160 acres of uncleared land and decided to homestead it.

Neighbors helped her throw up a log cabin and, working alone, she cleared enough for a vegetable garden and a hay field. When she wasn't tending her own place, she did odd jobs for others: haying, digging potatoes, anything that offered itself. During the summer the food ran out and Mrs. Fredrickson, who hated to kill things, decided to go out and shoot a moose to feed her children for the long subzero winter.

Borrowing a big crocked dugout from some Indians, she put her three children aboard and took to the river in search of her next six months' meals. She was sure she'd get a moose, for two reasons: She'd hunted and trapped with her father and her husband for years, and she just had to get one. The first moose she saw was a female with a calf, and in spite of her desperate situation she could not bring herself to shoot it. Finally, she did bag one, and with all three of her children crying at the sight of the dead animal, she dressed it and higged it back to the cance. In the spring of 1930, they ran out of food again and with the rivers frozen, she had no choice but to walk 27 miles to the nearest town to try to borrow some supplies against her future crops. This time she left the children with a neighbor. The snow was deep and she were only a pair of Indian moccasins, denim. overalls, an old wool sweater and a denim jacket.

There, a kindly grocer advanced her 30 pounds of food, which she carried 46 miles home on her back. Sullivan completed eight of 15 passes in the final quarter and pleased the Atlanta Falcons, to whom he reported yesterday. Tagge, the Nebraska star playing for his college coach, Boh De-vaney, who directed the All-Stars, could do little. CANTON, Ohio, July 30 (AP). -Kansas City hackup quarter-back Mike Livingston ran 39 yards for one touchdown and passed for another yesterday, rallying the Chlefs to a 23-17 victory over the New York Glants in the annual Pro Football Hall of Pame game, the first exhibition game of the season between National Football League teams. More than 5,000 fans surrounded the football-shaped Hall-of-Fame huilding prior to the game for an induction ceremony for NUERBURGRING, West Ger- "What was I supposed to do? many, July 30 (NYT).—Jacky Ston for him?" Ichz'e Ferrari lost an exhaust pipe, but the way things were going at the Nuerburgring today, this was hardly enough to stop the Belgian from scoring a record-Regazzoni, who was also accused hy Stewart of zig-zagging along breaking victory by 47.7 seconds in the German Grand Prix.

Clay Regazzoni of Switzerland, who was merely losing oil pressure, gave Ferrari a one, two He also gave Jackie Stewart a bad temper after the Scotsman crashed trying to over-take him on the last lap.

The world champion was one of many drivers to whom things happened. Emerson Fittipaldi, the Brazilian who leads the driver tandings with 43 points, had his Lotus-Ford catch fire while he was second, Henri Pescarolo left the track in his March-Ford while he was fifth, but the Frenchman

Jean-Pierre Beltoise of France, who then was fifth, had to come into the pits a lap from home because the battery was falling out of his BRM and wound up Denny Hulme of New Zealand, who entered the day third in the drivers' standings, his McLeren-Ford engine quit, And, of course Chris Amon had trouble first. The unlucky New Zealander missed the start because he couldn't get his Matra-Simca under way with ignition trouble and finished fifteenth, almost two of the gigantic 14.1-mile laps behind.

But Stewart was the only driver livid after the 198.65-mile What happened, simply, was that Regazzoni, the man the other drivers call "crash." and Stewart brushed wheels on the last of the 14 laps and Stewart's Tyrrell-Ford spun and crashed into a safety barrier.

The Scotsman was uninjured, hut he lost a big opportunity to cut into Fittipaldi's 16-point lead for the world championship with only four races remaining. In fact, Fittipaldi's pit crew gave Jackie the "evil finger" after Emersoo's gear box caught fire.

Stewart, however, blamed Regazzoni. He was right behind the 32-year-old Swiss while Ickx was off by himself at the head of the 27-car field. But coming out of a left-hand turn, Regazzoni made a slight mistake and Stewart, forcing the advantage in order to gain the six points for second place instead of the four for third, overtook.

The two cars, side by side, went into a right hand turn. Regaz-zoni was on the inside, but Stewart claimed to be enough in front. ing it was my corner," said Stewart. "I was ahead and in a normal set of circumstances this should have been sufficient," Asked if Regazzoni might also have been endangering himself, Stewart snapped: "I don't think he understands these things."

Regazzoni, in turn, complained: Every time there is an accident. it's always my fault, even when it is me who crashes. This time,

"I was on the inside," he said.

Lindbergh On the SST:

For me, aviation has value only to the extent that it contributes to the quality of the human life it serves.'

By Charles A. Lindbergh

it is costly, noisy, a polluter, and its range is relatively short. After careful study and considerable development, the United States against constructing supersonic transports unless more satisfactory performances can be

The French and British govern-ments, on the contrary, have decided to produce SSTs regardless of cost and resulting en-vironmental deterioration, and to force them onto the airlines of the world. The Russian government alto plans to operate SSTs. Political and financial considerations of major magnitude are involved. The American people must decide what action we will take under these circumstances,

My own interest in supersonic flight began about 1928 when I tried to look into the future beyond the airplace and propeller, Obviously, jet propulsion of-fored possibilities. Probing further led me to collaboration Probing with Robert Goddard in his early liquid-rocket experiments in New Mexico. I maintained close contact with his work until after the start of World War II. In 1945, in Bavaria, I discussed with the German Bircraft designer Messerschmitt the possibility of supersonic passenger flight between America and Europe. He was of the opinion that it could be achieved within 20 years.

The first detailed study I saw of supersonic transports had been made by the United Aircraft Corp. at East Hartford, Conn. It indicated that speeds approaching 2,500 miles an hour might he commercially feasible—speeds faster than a rifle bullet.

During early stages of SST planning, I took part in con-ferences between Pan American World Airways representatives and Boeing, Douglas, Lockheed and North American engineers in the United States, and Concorde engineers in Europe. These con-ferences led me to believe that SSTs would become practical for carrying passengers, mail and special cargo, and that they could be in scheduled operation in the early 1970s.

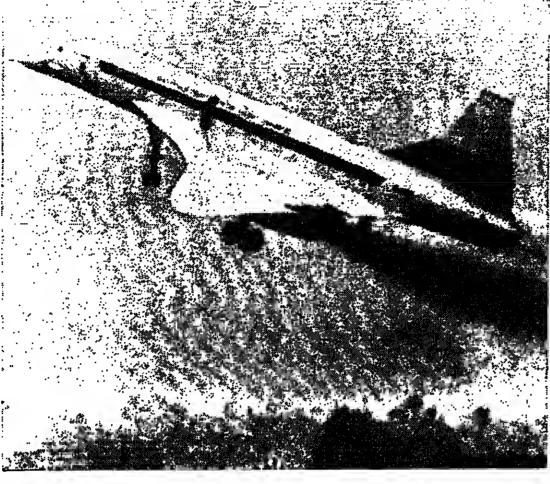

Thereafter, year by year, technical, economic and environmental problems, which bad al-

NEW YORK NYT .- A supersonic transport is fast, but the series of the SST. Unexpected complications arose with aerodynames and structure. Weight estimates increased, resulting in the need for larger engines. Costs rose accordingly. Our early discussions took for granted that sonic booms from SSTs flying overhead could be held down to levels acceptable to people living on the ground. Estimated booms have now mounted far above acceptable levels.

Sonic booms form only one aspect of environmental problems the SST encounters. High takeoff and landing noises form another. No one knows what compounding surface-of-the-earth effects may result from constant jet-engine exhausts in our higher atmosphere. We do know that by comparison to the jet airliners we are now operating. SSTs would burn more than twice as much fuel per passenger mile, This is one of the costs of speed, Atmospheric pollution would therefore be aeriously increased in an era when it is essential for us to redoce such pollution. The drain on our planet's oil resources would also increase.

Years ago, I came to the conclusion that while we had suf-ficient technical knowledge to build superaonic transports, we could do so only at a cost that would be uneconomic for the airlines operating them, even if they were permitted to fly over densely populated Breas regardless of sonic booms. Many airline operators have now come to B similar conclusion.

If the decision were based solely on Birline economy and the quality of human environment, think supersonic transports would not be placed in operation in the foreseeable future. But other factors are involved. Many developmentalists believe that the progress of mankind depends on ceaseless technological improvement, measured by such elements as speed. They have backing from manufacturers.
Governments are interested in maintaining potential military facilities and avolding unemployment. National prestige and ad-ministrative commitments exercise their influence. In the case of the Concorde, prototypes had heen constructed and bundreds of millions of dollars spent before fully realized. Political and commercial interests invariably produce supporting propaganda. If supersonic transports are placed in international operation regardless of economic and environmental factors, our American airlines will be in a difficult position because they on making a profit in order to exist and cannot afford to operate uneconomic aircraft. Foreign airlines, with government support more easily available, are not thus restricted. At subsidized. below-cost fares, the SST would have great attraction for passengers. What courses of action open to us? We could, by legislation, prohibit supersonic transports from operating on or over U.S. territory. This would almost certainly cause criticism and retalistion by foreign gov-eroments. Our U.S. airlines would still face SST competition

Under Pressure

We could permlt forcign supersonic transports to operate from our alports, regardless of atmospheric contamination, pro-vided they fly over U.S. ter-ritory at subsonic speeds and meet our noise-level requirements. But unless we operate SSTs our-selves, this would place our American airlines at a critical disadvantage. Loss of leader-ship and prestige would result. with economic repercussions.

We could purchase Concordes in order to compete on equal footing with the foreign airlines operating them. This would require government financial as-sistance of major magnitude. It would force our acceptance of sonic booms and atmospheric contamination. It would also raise the question of starting another SST program of our own regardless of environment and cost. We would be under constant political and commercial pressures to permit supersonic flying over populated areas.

To what extent do we control our own destiny economically and environmentally? Having decided not to put SSTs in operation, must we still do so because of the pressure of foreign governments? Even more basic is the issue of whether commercial and political interests make it impossible for modern man to protect his own atmosphere and senses. The supersonic transport symbolizes this issue. Our response to its challenge will indicate our future. Is the quality of life or the advance of technology to guide us?

For me, aviation has value only to the extent that it contributes to the quality of the human life it serves. Research in fields of supersonic flight is, obviously, of great importance and should con-tinue, but my personal conclusion is that the regular operation of SSTs in their present state of development will be dis-advantageous both to aviation and to the peoples of the world. I believe we should prohibit their scheduled operation on or above U.S. territory as long as their effect on our overall environment remains unsatisfactory.
